HRH Prince William Launches New China Centre Building at Oxford

There was much to celebrate on the 8th September 2014 when the Duke of Cambridge officially launched the impressive Dickson Poon University of Oxford China Centre Building at St Hugh's College. "The China Centre is an enormous achievement. It stands on the foundations of many centuries of learning in the University of Oxford about China, and it marks a significant leap forward. The strength and creativity of the partnership between the University and St Hugh's provides a solid foundation for the creation of what has the potential to become the foremost place of study about China in the world," said the Duke. Joining Prince William in the traditional Chinese ribbon-cutting ceremony were Hong Kong philanthropist Dickson Poon, Chancellor Lord Patten, Vice-Chancellor Prof. Andrew Hamilton, China Centre Director Prof. Rana Mitter, St Hugh's Principal Dame Elish Angiolini QC and China's Ambassador to the United Kingdom, His Excellency Liu Xiaoming. Mr Poon contributed £10 million towards the £21 million cost for the China Centre Building which covers 5 floors and 5,500 square metres. Its dedicated library and a reading room will provide a permanent home for 60,000 volumes and a significant part of the Bodleian Libraries' Chinese book collection.

The China Oxford Scholarship Fund's website was revamped over the summer thanks to the handiwork of 2013 China Oxford Scholar Shijian Li. In spite of his busy academic and work schedule, Shijian volunteered to help the Fund update its website. Shijian earned his MSc in Computer Science and was at Green Templeton College. Thank you Shijian for your assistance with giving our website a fresh look and congratulations on your new job with Google in London!

Over the summer, the Fund's scholarship programme was presented to visiting Chinese students attending the CBL Oxford Summer School programme at Oriel College. 2011 China Oxford Scholar and 2012 Tang Oxford Scholar Yingqi Liu conducted a brief presentation to the Chinese undergraduate students and talked about his Oxford experience as well as being a COSF Scholar. He provided information about the Fund's awards programme and application process. Yingqi is reading for a DPhil in Geography and the Environment and is at St John's College. Thanks very much Yingqi for being an exceptional ambassador for our educational initiative.

Lastly, it's fantastic to learn that 2010 China Oxford Scholar and 2011 Wolfson China Scholar Yuge Ma is in New Delhi, India where she has just organised and moderated the 2nd Juxtapose Conference on multi-disciplinary research and studies on contemporary China and India at Jawaharlal Nehru University. Well done Yuge!
